I have just spoken to Simon Greaves, the consultant tasked by Douglas Wardle to produce a document. We agreed it would be in the form of what would usually accompany a 'subsequent consent application', such as a s73 application where an original application is updated. In using this phrase, Simon knows the type of document to produce but would be concerned to avoid the impression such an application was required in this case given the developer does not agree our consideration is necessary and the production of the document is purely a good will gesture to avoid legal costs of challenging our position.

Many thanks

Hywel
